Planning a holiday

Information for people with or affected by motor neurone disease

If you have MND, it is important that any break away from home meets your needs.

A holiday is a very personal decision based on likes and interests. It is best to start with some idea of the type of resort, destination and price range that appeals to you, rather than beginning your search based on accessibility. Many holiday choices can be made accessible to you with forward planning.

This information sheet looks at what you may wish to think about when planning a holiday, in the following sections:

- 1: What should I think about when booking a holiday?
- 2: How can carers take a break?
- 3: Can I get financial help towards a holiday?
- 4: How do I find out more?

 This symbol is used to highlight our other publications. To find out how to access these, see Further information at the end of this sheet.

 This symbol is used to highlight quotes from other people with or affected by MND.

This information has been evidenced, user tested and reviewed by experts.

1: What should I think about when booking a holiday?

To get the most out of your holiday, it is worth getting advice from accessible travel specialists. Be completely honest about your disability and its effects, so they can help meet your needs.

 For information about accessible transport to get to your destination, see: Information sheet 12C - Travel and transport

Once the choice of holiday destination has been made, you can begin looking for accessible accommodation to suit your needs. Many self catering properties, hotels and guest houses have disabled facilities ranging from wet rooms to hoists. Make contact well in advance and again just before departure.

 “Remember to compare costs and ensure services and providers understand how MND affects you.”

Even if the accommodation says it has access for wheelchairs, ask detailed questions to ensure it is suitable for you and your type of wheelchair. When booking, ask whether staff are able help with care, special diets and any other specific needs you may have.

What equipment should I take?

If the equipment you need is not already available in the property, many places allow equipment to be rented.

Equipment can sometimes be arranged through the branch of the British Red Cross nearest your holiday destination. Check this out before you book your holiday.

What care will be available?

Some holiday destinations offer care services. Alternatively you may wish to find a care worker who can assist you while away. You can source care workers through the Disabled Carers Directory. The Disability Aid Trust help towards the costs of care workers. See Useful organisations in section 4: How do I find out more? for contact details.

Will medical staff abroad know about MND?

Wherever you travel, medical staff who are unfamiliar with your case or MND may not fully understand the impact of the disease. It is worth taking some useful key phrases and information about MND in the local language.

You may find the following resources helpful:

Understanding my needs – our 'patient passport' to help others understand your needs

Introduction to MND – an overview of MND, available in a selection of languages

How do I choose a resort?

Whether in the UK or abroad, ensure the resort you are going to:

- is flat for easy access
- has ramps for wheelchairs, if required
- allows for easy access to disabled toilets.

If you are travelling to less developed countries, the facilities and accessibility may not be the same as you are used to, so double check that your requirements can be met. If you would like a resort to rent specialist equipment on your behalf, this needs to be discussed and booked well in advance.

It is also worth asking about additional services and support as some resorts may be able to offer the following:

- electric beds to alter your position (these are called profiling beds)
- bed rails
- room hoists or mobile hoists
- riser recliner chairs
- wheel-in shower chairs
- wet rooms with shower seats
- hoists for the swimming pool.

Some areas also have specialised beach wheelchairs. The local tourist information centre for the resort may be able to advise.

Will I be able to go on a cruise?

Most holiday choices can be made accessible for people with disabilities, and a cruise is no exception. This can be a practical choice, as all of your facilities are in one place and you can visit several destinations, whilst only unpacking once.

Many cruise ships offer accessible facilities, such as wheelchair adapted cabins and level access wet rooms. Check with your travel operator to see what is available and whether specialist equipment can be arranged if needed.

You do need to consider the destinations the ship will visit, as it may be difficult to go ashore in some countries without proper docks. In these instances, you are often taken from ship-to-shore in boats, which may be difficult if you use a wheelchair.

It is worth checking which ports are accessible before you book. Most chartered cruise companies will have trained attendants on board who will be knowledgeable about the destinations to be visited.

How can I make travel arrangements?

You may need assistance to travel, whether by:

- road
- rail
- air
- ferry.

It is always important to plan your travel ahead of time. Your travel operator will find it helpful if you give them at least 48 hours notice of any assistance you require.

For specific advice on how to reach your destination, see:
Information sheet 12C – Travel and transport

For government information about accessible travel by road, air or train see their online guidance at: www.gov.uk/transport-disabled

Will I be able to get travel insurance?

Insurance can be difficult as some policies exclude people with certain conditions. It is always worth asking a company to clarify, as they may be able to provide a solution based on your needs. Your premium or excess is likely to cost more because of your diagnosis. Medical treatment is more expensive in some countries, so this may also increase the amount you pay.

Remember to obtain more than one travel insurance quote to compare costs and always read the policy document to check that MND is covered. If you are going abroad, check whether your insurance covers an unscheduled return flight in case you need to come back early.

Insurance companies can frequently change their offers, which makes it difficult to provide a list of those who support specific conditions. Our MND Connect helpline have contact details of companies who are currently known to support people with MND with holiday cover.

If you are taking any special equipment on your travels, this may get damaged, lost or stolen in transit and can be expensive to replace. You may wish to insure these items, or take out extra insurance for the period of the holiday.

You may also wish to apply for an E111 European Health Insurance Card which can be used to cover necessary medical treatment within the European Economic Area. This will only cover state-provided medical care which may be quite basic in some countries. Application forms are available from the Post Office, by telephone 0300 330 1350 or online at www.nhs.uk/ehic

"My wife made a daily diary of everywhere we went while abroad. When I became ill out there, the diary helped with the holiday insurance claim, making it easier to submit dates for hospital stays and expenses, with receipts attached."

2: How can carers take a break?

If you are a carer, you may need to take a break occasionally from the demands of caring. Your wellbeing matters too and it is important to recuperate if you feel tired or stressed. A holiday, or regular short breaks to go shopping or to meet friends, may help.

Government funding exists to help carers take a break, although this requires a carer's assessment to decide the appropriate level of support. This should take into consideration your health, work, leisure and other commitments. A needs assessment may also be needed for the person you support. This can help with arrangements for respite or replacement care that may be required. You can request these assessments from your local authority or, in Northern Ireland, your local health and social care trust.

You can read more about breaks for carers and respite care through the Carers Direct online service, search for accessing respite care at: www.nhs.uk

For more information to help with the demands of caring see our publication: Caring and MND: support for you

3: Can I get financial help towards a holiday?

Financial constraints can make it difficult to have a holiday. There are some sources of funding that may help with the costs of your break.

Many people use local sources of funding. Local organisations also advise on financial help and offer support. Find your local branches using directory enquiries or search online. Some organisations that may be able to help you include:

- National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux
- Benevolent charitable funds
- Family Holiday Association
- Rotary Clubs
- Round Tables
- Lions Associations.

If you wish to access funding support, it is important to look into this as early as possible. Organisations often have a limited time frame for applications each year, and receive many more applications than they can agree.

The MND Association may also be able to help towards the cost of a holiday. Contact your local branch for more information, or call MND Connect on 0808 802 6262. We also provide more information at: www.mndassociation.org/financialsupport
