Alison Morton

Palliative and End of Life Care Lead
Dorset County Hospital

Alison has had the privilege of caring for people with life limiting disease throughout her career and over the last twenty years has worked across the palliative care demographic in both nursing and management roles.

Over the years Alison has gained experience and an in-depth working knowledge in the importance of stakeholder engagement and strategic management in primary and secondary care, the public and private sector and charitable organisations, in both rural and inner-city settings. She has worked alongside and value the importance of the whole health and social care network from volunteers to chief executives.

Alison has always striven to maintain her nursing knowledge, skills and expertise, by consciously pursuing roles that have enabled her to continue using clinical skills whilst also developing as a senior lead.

Her ethos as a leader is one of continuous development and empowerment, meaning that she has a team who practice and conduct themselves at a senior level and she has been called a 'transformational leader'.
